From San Francisco.

SAN FRANCISCO, October 29.—The following students graduated last night from the medical department of the State University: Jas. W. Lake, Francis Delmont, Young E. Hicks, R. A. M. McLean, John W. Waters, George E. Nottage, Charles F. Miller and William P. McDermott.

Great interest is felt in sporting circles over the great $3,500 trotting race to come off to-morrow at Bay District Fair grounds between Occident and Fullerton. Pools are selling briskly. Fullerton is the favorite by about 100 to 90 on Occident. Many outside bets have been made, and if the weather continues pleasant there will be an immense attendance at the grounds.

No change in the prices of greenbacks.

SAN FRANCISCO, October 30.—The United States grand jury have found three true bills of indictment against Joseph McArdle, second mate of the ship Undaunted, who is charged with maltreating Oscar Westgrew, E. Kahn and E. J. Jenner, seamen on the ship. There are eight counts in the indictment accusing defendant of ill using Westgrew, and three in the Jenner indictment, including an assault with a belaying pin, and McArdle is charged with assaulting Kahn on four different occasions.

The Carson Hill Mining Co. incorporated to-day with a capital stock of $2,000,000, to mine in Calaveras county. The Directors are H. D. Bacon, Thos. Brown, Chas. T. Botts, Wm. Irvine and Robert Irvine.

The celebrated trotting horse Gloster died to-day of lung fever, and was buried at the grounds of the Bay District Fair track. The horse was sick when he came here.

The great trotting race to come off to-morrow, mile and repeat, between Occident and Fullerton. In the pools, Occident brings $110, Fullerton $100.

The all-absorbing topic among turfmen is the four mile running race to come off on the 14th.

SAN FRANCISCO, October 30.—The survivors of the passengers who arrived in this city on the steamer Panama, October 31, 1849, will celebrate the event with a grand banquet to-morrow night. About 50 of the 500 will attend, these being all who are known to be alive and in the State.

Interior California.

SAN DIEGO, October 30.—The steamer Arizona arrived at 8 o'clock this forenoon, took the Costa Rica in tow, and sailed for San Francisco direct at 11 A. M.

NEVADA.

VIRGINIA, October 30.—About 2 o'clock this afternoon the Belcher air-shaft was discovered to be on fire. The fire started at the 850-foot level, and a few moments afterwards huge volumes of smoke poured out of the mouth of the shaft. Alarm was sounded by various fire bells and hoisting works' whistles, which brought out the fire department in full force, and hurried to the scene, followed by thousands of spectators, including women and children fearing husbands and fathers who were working in the mine, had perished in the flames. The whole energies of the officers and men employed in the mine was devoted to extinguishing the flames. Superintendent Smith and foreman Gonnelly were on the ground personally, and superintended the work. An immense stream of water was brought to bear on the fire through hoisting works hose half an hour after the commencement of the fire. The flames, which had hitherto been smothering, burst up into the air with terrific violence a distance of several hundred feet, hurling fragments of rock in every direction. At this stage the fire resembled a huge volcano. A few men who worked in the shaft when the fire broke out, met with a narrow escape from death. The last who came up the shaft had to pass through the flames a portion of the way, and came near being suffocated. Timbers of the shaft will, in all probability, be consumed to the depth of 1,000 feet. The fire department of Gold Hill, under direction of Foreman McMarten, are working heroically, doing everything in their power to extinguish the flames. No danger is apprehended of the fire extending into the mine, as the draft is up the shaft. The origin of the fire is unkown; it is supposed, however, it caught from a lighted candle left sticking in the timbers on the 850-foot level. As soon as the fire, which occurred about the time of changing shifts, was discovered, the men working in the Belcher, Crown Point and Yellow Jacket mines were brought to the surface with the greatest possible dispatch. Some of the Belcher men found their way above ground by way of the Jacket shaft.

LATER—They have got water on the fire below and are driving up the smoke.

LOS ANGELES, October 30.—Last evening Hugh Forster, a brother of Don Juan Forster, fell dead, while riding along Main street, from a rupture of one of the blood vessels of the heart. Deceased was a single man, forty-five years old, and a resident of San Francisco.

A man named Keyster died here to-day at the Clarendon Hotel. The Masonic fraternity took charge of the remains.

THE TERRITORIES.

The Masonic Fraternity of Montana, now affiliating, number 700.

The papers of Idaho and Washington Territories are now filled with but little except politics.

It is now currently reported that the Utah Western narrow-gauge railway will not be completed to Lake Point until next spring.

A gentleman from Beaver, who has been in the "Strange Land" in Eastern Oregon, says gold is to be found in nearly all the streams.

The new Catholic Church, on Lapwai creek, will be dedicated on Sunday Nov. 1st, 1874. Rev. F. G. Gazzoli, S. J., of the Coeur d'Alene Mission is expected to perform the ceremony.

S. S. Fenn, of the First Judicial District in Idaho, declines the nomination for Prosecuting Attorney, thinking he has a better thing in running for Congress.

The ladies of "The 1st Unitarian Society of Olympia," have bought from Samuel Williams a lot for a church site. A minister has been secured from the East, who is expected to arrive at an early day.

A Deer Lodge paper says Montana has long since placed herself in the front rank in accepting and experimenting with the new ideas and curious customs, overflowing from the foundation of genius. No sooner does she hear that grasshoppers were not only made to eat but to be eaten, than a man stands ready, seizes on the first grasshopper he sees, munches it, pronounces it delicious, and the people are satisfied and take his word. And now, satisfied that cremation will be the popular method of disposing of your dead mother-in-law, she tries the experiment in the cheapest manner possible. The particular credit of the experiment belongs to the Heathen element of German gulch, who one day last week cremated six of their deceased countrymen in the most successful manner.

In the early days of Montana the schoolmaster was abroad plenty. He was an uneducated cuss, and had received his diploma and certificate of perfection from an Arkansas cross-roads examiner. Some of his spelling would pain the coffined bones of Noah Webster, and his sign-post lettering looked like a cross between ancient Hebrew and black Boston italic. He was honest though. In the fall of 1862 there stood, on the bank at the confluence of Rattlesnake creek and the Beaverhead river, a sign-post with a rough hewn board nailed across the top, with the following intelligence daubed, with wagon tar, thereon:

Tu grass Hop Her digins

30 myle

[illegible] keep the Trale next the bluffe

On the other side of the board read:

To jonni granis

One Hunred & twenti myle

The "grass Hop Her digins" are at the town of Bannack—and the city of Deer Lodge is built on "jonni grants" ranch.

JUDGE DEADY'S REPLY TO JUDGE STRONG.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN:

In the Bulletin of the 22d inst., Judge Strong attempts to answer my communication in the OREGONIAN of the 15th inst., upon the orthography of the word WALLAMET.

The question is certainly worthy of a candid and intelligent consideration, and I am sorry that my critic has allowed himself to descend from the high ground of historical inquiry to the low level of spiteful personalities and dull and irrelevant wit.

True, I choose to distinguish Portland in Oregon from Portland in Maine in the same way that Frankfort and other towns having like names are distinguished in Europe and America, but how that unimportant fact affects the question under consideration is not apparent.

Suppose I am "the only man who hails from Portland-on-Wallamet"—what then? Do mere numbers make right? If so my poor critic has often been found in the wrong and upon more important matters than this. Besides, I am not anxious to divide that honor with any one—not even with Judge Strong. Neither am I hurt because some uncultivated coot once sneered at my use of Portland-on-Wallamet, and that Judge Strong, for lack of better argument, now echoes him.

Portland-on-Wallamet is "my humor," and "a college of wit-crackers cannot flout me out of" it.

But I must not waste space upon the wit of my critic. His errors, which are gross and palpable, demand attention. In correcting them, I do not wish to be understood as charging Judge Strong with intentional misstatement. But we all know that in matters of this kind he has long since fallen into the pleasant delusion, that a person of his extraordinary ability and remarkable experience, may safely rely upon his imagination for his facts.

He begins with an error. Though not a material one, the circumstance shows the general tendency to inaccuracy.

> "When a new code is prepared by the Judge, it produces a newspaper controversy upon this subject," etc.

I have had the honor of being engaged in two compilations of the laws of Oregon—one published in 1866 and the other in 1874. Now, the only newspaper controversy that ever took place "upon this subject" in Oregon, prior to the present one, was not contemporaneous with either of these publications, but occurred in the spring of 1870, between Judges Thornton and Strong.

In this controversy the latter asserted, in a letter published in the Oregon Herald, of March 13, 1870, that the name of our river was "derived from the French," and meant "Little William." At the same time he published and partially endorsed the silly little legend of "the three French Willies or Guillamettes"—the latter spelled without a u—who were made to indulge in pre-historic gambols on the bank of the river, at some remote, but unknown period, from which reliable circumstance the Skookum myth of Little William, or Wil-liam-ette, had its illustrious origin. But the Little Willies would not bear repeating, and, therefore, while the Bulletin letter is mainly a reproduction of the Herald one, we are left to walk without the light of the legend, and to surmise, as best we may, "when and how this spurious Gallicism and orthographic anomaly first found its way to Oregon and was applied to the Wallamet river and valley."

But, seriously, if the name is of French origin, or a derivative of the French Guillaume, the time and occasion of its application, or the origin of its use can be shown. Upon this theory it is not indigenous, and must have been given to the river since 1811. The burden of proof is upon those who assert the proposition; whereas, we who assert that the name is an Indian word, and Wallamet, establish our proposition, prima facie, by showing, as we do, that from the first occupation of the country by white people—about 1812—the word was spelled with a broad a, or its equivalent, in the first syllable, and recognized as an Indian word.

Nor did I "claim that the word Wallamet become changed into Willamette about 1840." I said that among the persons who came to the country between 1843 and 1850 it is probable that there were some who mistook the word for a French one, because of the orthography of its final syllable, and that "about this period the word Willamette for Wallamet made its appearance in letters and journals from the East." Nor did I admit, or claim that the word has ever become changed into Willamette. Certainly that form of the word was not commonly in use in Oregon as late as 1850.

Unable to answer or explain away Dr. McLoughlin's testimony, it is summarily disposed of with the convenient assertion that it "must have been based upon hearsay or a guess." Hearsay or guess indeed! At the time of this statement the Doctor had lived in the country over a quarter of a century, and during that time was the chief personage in it. He spoke of what he knew and could not have been mistaken about. His testimony upon the point is worth more than all the authorities quoted or misquoted by Judge Strong.

So with the testimony of Archbishop Blanchet. He stated that he came here in 1838 and went abroad in 1844, and that during all that time he never heard the river called otherwise than Wallamette; nor until he returned in 1847.

Unable to explain or contradict this statement, my erudite friend attempts to parry it with the flippant remark that "an educated French gentleman,"—by reason, I suppose, of some orthographic idiosyncracy peculiar to that class of people—would naturally and necessarily pronounce Willamette as Wallamette, and spell it accordingly. If this be so, I suppose "an educated French gentleman" would spell wig as wag, wine as wane, link as lank, and pit as pat. No wonder, then, "We Oregonians lay no claim to being French gentlemen." But what will the French gentleman say to this?

I cited the History of Oregon, published by Rev. Gustavus Hines in 1859, in which the word is uniformly spelled Wallamette. Judge Strong answers me as follows:

> "He (Hines) published a book about Oregon in early times, before there was any controversy concerning the name, in which he uniformly spelled the word Willamette. The Judge quotes from a work subsequently written by Mr. Hines after the controversy arose, in which he spells the word Wallamette. This is susceptible of but one interpretation—that he had then become a disciple. Mr. Hines probably took the same liberty with the orthography of the letter he quotes of Commander Slocum that he did with the orthography of his first work."

Mark now, how plain a tale shall put this conceited critic down:

In 1859, Rev. Gustavus Hines published a history of Oregon in which the word is uniformly spelled Wallamette. This is the first book he ever published on the subject. In 1868 he published a second book entitled "Oregon and its Institutions" in which he appears to have accommodated himself to the modern usage and spelled it Willamette.

In the first book the orthography is based upon the writer's observation and knowledge derived from a residence in the country since 1840. In the second he went with the current and followed an ignorant corruption.

William H. Gray, whose history I quote, and who ought to be good authority on the question, having lived in the country since 1836, is sought to be discredited upon the ground that "He is a disciple of Judge Deady," and a "partisan." If there is any discipleship in the case, it is the other way. That he is a "partisan" upon this question, I take the liberty of doubting, until I am better informed; and if he were, I am not quite certain that his partisanship would lead him into such a gross and palpable misstatement as Judge Strong has made in relation to the Rev. Mr. Hines' publications.

In reply to the citation from the McLoughlin manuscript published by Mrs. Victor in the OREGONIAN of July 14, 1870, in which the word is uniformly spelled Wallamette, he says—"This spelling, so far as the authority is concerned is Mrs. Victor's, and not the person whom she quotes." This is not only an uncourteous insinuation against Mrs. Victor, but a clear mistake,—and such a reckless, inexcusable one as may deserve a harsher epithet. How did Judge Strong know that Mrs. Victor had changed the orthography of the word, if even such had been the fact? But the contrary is true. The manuscript is in the possession of Dr. McLoughlin's daughter—Mrs. Harvey, of this city. I have examined it and the word is spelled Wallamette throughout it.

Alex. Ross, the author of "The Columbia River," whom I cited as authority, is said to have been "a Scotchman," and therefore it is alleged he "could not have pronounced the word correctly if he had known it."

I submit that Ross being, as his book and position show, a man of observation and education, and having come to this country in the early part of the century as one of the chief men of Astor's Pacific Fur Company—probably before a white man had ever set foot in the Wallamet valley—and having remained in the country for years afterwards, he is more likely to know the true name of the river and be able to pronounce it, even if he was "a Scotchman," than any Yankee, however well educated, who came to the country in 1850 and lived at Cathlamet, W. T., until 1861.

The authority of Washington Irving, whose Astoria and Bonneville I quoted, is disposed of not by the special plea that he was "a Scotchman," and therefore inapt of speech, but by the irrelevant if not incorrect assertion, that "When these works were written the author had no personal knowledge of the proper orthography, and did not spell the word alike in the two works."

In the American Cyclopedia (vol. 9, p. 626), it is stated that in his youth, Irving often visited the station of the Northwest Fur Company at Montreal; and that in the preparation of these works he had access to the papers of the "Adventurers by sea and land" employed by Astor; and also the manuscripts of Col. Bonneville.

Reputation is evidence of a name and knowledge of reputation—what people call a place or person—is personal knowledge of such name. But admit that, taken in the narrowest sense of the word he wrote without personal knowledge—his information was ample and most authentic. As I said in my letter of the 13th inst., he "doubtless obtained his orthography from the reports and letters of the adventurers and traders who first reduced the word to writing as they received it from the lips of the Indians, to whose language it belonged."

It is the common testimony of persons who have read Irving's description of the Columbia river and its scenery, drawn from the same sources, that it has not been equaled for beauty and accuracy by those who have since written from personal observation. True he spells the final syllable with u instead of an e. But in a final unaccented syllable the difference between u and e does not effect the sound. Take for instance the words gam-ut and spin-et. The final unaccented syllable in one is spelt with e and the other with u, but there is no appreciable difference in the sound. So with the o in the first syllable of the word as spelled by him in "Astoria." Between short o and broad a the difference in sound is not appreciable. But this fact goes to prove that although the orthography of the word was not then settled, in these respects, the sound of the first syllable was recognized as a broad one, so much so, that it was thought convenient and proper to spell it with an a—Wallamet.

"Lewis and Clarke," says Judge Strong, "give no other name to the river than Multnomah. This appears to be a compound Latin word, meaning the river of many names. They never, however, explored the river much above the present site of the city of Portland."

The etymology and history of this paragraph are both at fault. The former is only paralleled by John Phenix's comic etymology of the word Trinidad, as applied to a river and bay in northern California. It is derived, said he, from two Latin words—Trini, three, and dad, father, and means the Three Fathers.

Multnomah is a pure Indian word, and a beautiful one. It should have been the name of this town and then there would have been no occasion for my writing Portland on anything; besides which my facetious adversary would have lacked much of the useless ammunition he has exploded in this controversy.

The word is found, so far as I know, first in Lewis and Clarke's narrative. These pioneer explorers passed down the Columbia in the fall of 1805 and back again in the spring of 1806, without discovering the Wallamet river. On their way back, and when camped a few miles above the mouth of the river, they heard of its existence from the Indians. Being in urgent need of food, they sent out hunting parties in various directions. Clarke came down to the mouth of the river in a canoe, found the entrance, and paddled up it about five miles above the head of Wapatoo island—now called Sauvie's island, and returned to camp the same day. As he did not reach "the present site of the city of Portland," by at least five miles, I cheerfully agree with Judge Strong, when he says that "they (L. & C.) never, however, explored the river much above" said site. No, not very much! Not even there!

Lewis, the principal man of the party, never saw the river, and Clarke only this once. The latter got some accounts of the river from the Indians about its mouth, from which he states among other things, that it had an affluent named Clackamos, which took its rise in Mt. Jefferson, and was navigable for canoes to its source. That the river itself came from the south a great distance, and probably drained the country in that direction as far as the Gulf of California. (See vol. 2 chap. 8, of Lewis & Clarke's Ex., prepared for the press by Paul Allen, Pub. at Phil., 1814.)

From this it is apparent that their knowledge of the subject was very limited. Because a large tribe of Indians at and about the mouth of the river were called Multnomahs, they called the river Multnomah, without knowing what its real name was. But whether Lewis and Clarke called the river Multnomah or otherwise, or whether the word means "many-named" or many-nomad river, is altogether immaterial so far as this question is concerned. Neither Wallamet nor Willamette have any relation with or dependence upon Multnomah. The attempt to name the river Multnomah failed. The river and valley were first explored by the people of the Pacific Fur Co., about the year 1812, and so far as I know they called the river Wallamette. No other name for it was known until between 1843 and 1850, when Willamette—a manifest corruption of the other—began to creep into use in the East.

Robert Greenhow is also quoted as authority for Willamette. Judge Strong does not give the dates of the publications to which he refers, and seldom their names. He does not mention what work of Greenhow's he refers to, or the date of its publication, but states that the preface is dated 1844.

In 1837, Greenhow made a report upon the Northwest coast, which was published by Congress in 1840. This "Memoir," as it was styled, was afterwards enlarged and published in 1846, as a "History of Oregon and California." In the "Memoir" the word is spelled Wallamet. In the subsequent History it is spelled with an i, but without the final te. This shows that Wallamet was the original name.

Dr. Twiss was not an or "the English Historiographer," but a doctor of the civil law who wrote and published an argument on "the Oregon Question" in reply to Greenhow, in 1846. He spells the word with an i as some others were then beginning to do. He might be quoted as authority on the "Oregon Question" but not the Wallamet question.

Although Wilkes was in Oregon in 1842, his narrative was not published until 1845, about the time Willamette was coming into use in the East. Indeed, I am inclined to think that this narrative, is the original authority by which this corruption was made current abroad, from whence it gradually came here. But of this more on another occasion.

The Rev. Mr. Beaver's testimony in favor of Wallamette is coolly doubted because, forsooth his evidence taken by the A. P. Society may have been reduced to writing by a scrivener and not himself, and that scrivener, in the year of grace 1838 and in the city of London, although he never heard of the matter before, may have written the word Wallamette while Mr. Beaver spoke it Willamette. Can conjectural criticism go farther than this?

Before closing, let me say that my venerable friend is again mistaken when he says he has "resided over 25 years in Oregon." He came here in the summer of 1850—24 years ago—and has been a diligent student of Oregon history ever since, as this correspondence fully discloses.

Now, if my critic cannot state correctly the time he has been in the country, why may he not be mistaken, when he says that he never "heard the river called by any other name than Willamette, until quite recently." Although he does not now remember it, it is quite certain that for the first 10 years after he came to the country he heard it pronounced Wallamet more often than otherwise. It is equally probable that between 1853 and 1855 he traveled on Capt. Bennett's steamboat—The Wallamet—both on the upper and lower river. She was the largest and best appointed boat of her day in these waters, and was named and commanded by an old Oregonian, who not only knew the name of the river that he navigated, but the year he came to the country.

Yours, MATTHEW P. DEADY.

Mr. D. E. Wheeler, living near Jolly's mill, Washington county, while digging a well last week, at the depth of 20 feet, threw out a fine specimen of gold-bearing quartz.

The Good [illegible] and Grangers of Hillsboro have repaired their hall in the old Court House. These [illegible] hold meetings every Saturday in their hall and are flourishing.

J. B. Roberts, a day or two since, sold a fraction over 187 acres of land, situated about 11 miles south of Albany, at $30 per acre, the larger portion being prairie, the balance timber.

The mammoth warehouse of Messrs. Parker & Morris, at Albany, contains about 150,000 bushels of wheat, and 15,000 bushels oats. About 20,000 bushels of Benton county wheat are stored there.

The municipal election at Albany comes off in about a month and candidates are cropping out all over the town, say the local papers. If there is anything which every American thinks he is fitted for it is to hold office.

Ben Holladay has order[illegible] to be built at Cornelius. We have been informed that this track is to be a private concern for the training of Mr. Holladay's blooded horses, and the use of a few personal friends.

The farmers of Umpqua valley are hauling their wheat from Estes', at the foot of the Calapooia mountains, to Cartwright's, on this side and upon the line of the O. & C. R. R., from whence it is shipped to Portland.

The Independent says: "An unusual amount of sickness is prevalent in Washington county this season, some of a very serious nature. A rain at the present time is certainly in order as well for the preservation of health as for farming purposes."

The number of students in Wallamet University at present is larger than ever known before at this time in the year. Forty-five have been added since the Fair week holidays, making the total number now enrolled in the various departments 222.

The Independent, heretofore published at Forest Grove, has been moved to Hillsboro, from which place it comes to us this week. We trust the change will conduce to the proprietor's success. The Independent is a good county paper and deserves a liberal support.

The coal mines of Nehalem will very soon be inspected, with a view to working them, and a large quantity of lumber will be required at the mines. Altogether, Nehalem valley begins to look up, and we hope to see developments of that region speedily made.

A proposition was before the last meeting of the Albany City Council, to allow Joseph Teal to build a wharfboat at the foot of Broadalbin street, in the Wallamet river, Teal to pay into the city Treasury $20 annually for such privilege, the time or extent of such privileges being limited to five years.

Last Saturday, one of Mr. Trullinger's sons while hauling a load of lumber near Centerville, fell under the wagon and one of the wheels passed immediately over his abdomen. Notwithstanding the wagon was loaded with 600 feet of fir lumber the boy came off with only some slight bruises.

The Astorian says that the settlers in Nehalem valley are very anxious to get some one to take in a saw and flouring mill, and a small investment this way will pay well from the start. The settlers will turn out with their teams at any time to take such machinery into the settlement free of charge to the owners. Here is a fine chance with plenty of water privileges, for some person to make a start in Nehalem.

The McMinnville Reporter says: "A child of Mr. J. M. Payne, one day last week, came very near being poisoned to death by swallowing the paint off from some of those wooden acrobats which are so popular among the little folks. The child took her playthings to the table and soaked one in her tea. Soon after drinking the tea she was taken very sick and went into a spasm. The parents discovered, directly, the cause of her sickness, and by the prompt administering of antidotes soon relieved her of her violent pain and she was doing well when last heard from."

GETTING DISCOURAGED.—The Attorney-General seems to have finally grown discouraged in the outrage business, as the dearth of that commodity in the political market for the last few days apparently indicates, day after day, the evidence that he strained every means to create the impression that there has been for months systematic and wholesale murders of white and black men in the South for no other reason than that they were Republicans, and that, in so doing, he, in nearly every instance, violated or procured the violation of the truth. Accumulated testimony comes in almost hourly from the very best sources that the Attorney-General has in this way made himself responsible for a perfected and ingenious system of misrepresentations and exaggerations of the boldest sort, for the purpose of affecting the fall elections.—Washington Special to the Chicago Tribune.

RETORT UNCOURTEOUS.—Rather personal was the pleasantry of Mrs. Swisshelm when, at the Chicago Suffrage Convention the other day, in the course of debate with Miss Susan B. Anthony, she said that the true way for woman to get her rights was "to sit down beside man—or if they pleased, on one of his knees—and quietly ask for them." The allusion to Bessie Turner's famous or infamous account of Tilton's peculiar mode of dispensing hospitality to at least one of his woman suffrage guests, was too obvious to be mistaken. The audience shrieked applause, and Miss Anthony hid her face in her hands.—Pittsburg Leader.

HONOR TO WHOM HONOR IS DUE.

EUGENE CITY, Oct. 29, 1874.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN:

The members of the Legislature from all the houses have returned home to meet the smiles or frowns of their constituents. The two Senators from this county, Hons. W. W. Bristow and R. B. Cochran, done nobly in working not only for the interests of Lane county, but for the whole State. Their votes are right on every important measure, and the people here feel like commending them for their good work. Some of the members in the House were unfortunate in making a record, for they seem to have been wrong in almost everything. Hon. J. D. Matlock, the leading Democratic member, not only labored zealously to defeat the most important measure for his own county, but was so far blind as to vote against both of the railroad bills which, above all other measures, were the most important before the Legislature. By his misrepresentations and blind zeal to serve two or three old fogies who are opposed to all improvements, he succeeded in defeating the bill to allow the County Court to levy a tax of 2½ mills for two years to build the State University. He grossly misrepresented the people in both measures, and utter political oblivion will be his much merited reward. His political hide is stretched, dried and salted down.

B. J. Pengra left here this morning for California, where he will remain a short time, and then visit Washington City and remain during the winter. He goes in the interest of the Winnemucca Railroad, and if any man in the State of Oregon merits succ[illegible] in a m[illegible] for the public good, it is certainly B. J. Pengra. He has been untiring in his efforts, meeting every opposition with an energy that knew no failure. The road will be built now without a doubt, and Pengra merits all the praise of the enterprise.

Local items are few and far between; in fact, nothing is doing in Eugene now that merits notice. Our people complain bitterly of hard times, and attribute all the woes with which we are surrounded to the dull sale and low price of wheat.

SATURDAY MORNING, OCTOBER 31, 1874.

THE IMMIGRATION COMMISSION—A DUTY FOR ALL.

The gentlemen appointed by His Excellency the Governor as Commissioners of Immigration are all of the very best citizens of the State, and familiar with its resources, advantages and opportunities. They may therefore be relied on to do whatever can be done to push forward the interests of the State by encouraging immigration. They are connected with business enterprises in Oregon, and will enter upon the duties of the Commission with such zeal as will be naturally inspired by the feeling of identification with the growth and expansion of the country.

The law provides no means with which the Commissioners are to carry into effect their plan of circulating information in the Eastern States and Europe concerning this State. For the means of doing this, therefore, they must rely upon private contributions. There should be no hesitation about giving to this object. The plan of sending abroad printed information about the country and the way to get here, is the only one that could be undertaken by the Commissioners, without a definite appropriation of money; and even that plan demands a considerable sum. There should be raised at once from $1,500 to $2,500, to be used in printing and mailing pamphlets. A less sum could, of course, be used to advantage, but that is the smallest amount that would fill the requirements for a year. Printing and postage stamps are cash articles.

Let it not be supposed that the distribution of printed information produces no positive results. By exactly this method Wm. Reid, Esq., at his own charge, has sent Oregon many a good citizen from the sturdy working classes of Scotland, and the same sort of effort will bring more of the same kind. Every steamer from San Francisco brings a large number of immigrants from the Eastern and Mississippi Valley States, many of whom have been led to undertake the journey hither, by pamphlets and newspaper accounts of the country, that have fallen into their hands. The names of these immigrants, for obvious reasons, seldom appear in the passenger lists, and hence people generally are not aware that large numbers of them are constantly arriving; but it is a fact, nevertheless. We have had these newly arrived immigrants call on us and say they had been induced to come to Oregon by reading Adams' pamphlet, or Hugh Small's book, or the OREGONIAN, which had been sent them from this office or by some acquaintance out here. We have had some of them, after looking around the country for a week or two to satisfy themselves of the truthfulness of the representations that they had received, come to the OREGONIAN office for pamphlets and papers to send to their acquaintances in the old States. Indeed, it is the common reply of the new-comer, when interrogated as to the circumstances by which his attention was directed to Oregon, that he read a description of the country, and not that he had been told of it by some returned tourist, who had visited our beautiful land.

This, then, being the most effectual means at our command for securing immigration, there should be no lack of money to make it thorough. In the hands of every friend of Oregon abroad, in every public or private circulating library, in every reading room, there should be a constant supply of information about Oregon, done into convenient form for distribution and use. The sum each person would be expected to contribute would be but small, and no one would miss it; but in the aggregate it would amount to enough to be of incalculable benefit to our State.

COL. CORNELIUS AND HIS DEFENSE.

It is not surprising that the Bulletin should undertake the defense of Col. Cornelius, as it is understood the Colonel only acted in obedience to the wishes of the owner of the Bulletin in taking the course he took with the railway bill. Those who are familiar with the transaction by which, in the summer of 1870, the previously existing antagonism between Cornelius and the owner of the Bulletin, was ended and the Colonel placed "in circumstances," were at no loss to account for the unprecedented conduct of the latter in relation to the bill; nor are they now astonished to see the Bulletin fly to his relief.

The Secretary of the west side railway company is now the Chief Editor of the Bulletin, and it is fair to presume that, with the exception of the occasional articles written by the Collector of Customs and a few—very few we hope—taken from the Nation and other Eastern papers and not credited, he is the author of the editorial articles that appear in the columns of the monopolist's organ. To such as give the editorial Secretary credit for being a much better and more candid man than those who have preceded him in the sanctum of the ring organ, the manner of his defense of the Colonel is, if the only surprise in the case, a real surprise nevertheless. Says the Bulletin:

> Whether the bill was of any importance or not is not the question. If it was duly passed by both Houses, and properly enrolled, it was the duty of Colonel Cornelius to sign the bill as President of the Senate as soon as it was presented to him in the open Senate. And we do not hesitate to say that if any bill so passed had been presented for his signature it would have been promptly signed, no matter who it favored or who it hurt. As the presiding officer, Colonel Cornelius could not leave his post of duty to go and hunt up bills, and it was clearly not his duty to do so. If the bill was of the importance pretended by the Oregonian, it was the duty of somebody to see that the bill was presented to the President of the Senate for his signature.

Of course, the organ of the man at whose behest the attempt was made to kill the bill, cannot perceive that it was an important measure, and must needs state its importance hypothetically. At that no one has a right to complain, for "business is business." But on the question of fact the Bulletin should have been a little more careful. The facts are: the bill was enrolled an hour and a half before time set for adjournment, and, some time before the Colonel arose to deliver his valedictory as President of the Senate, it was brought to him, with the signature of Speaker Drain attached to it, and accompanied by a message from that officer notifying the President of the Senate that he had signed it. Furthermore, when it became apparent from Cornelius' remarks that he was about to declare the Senate adjourned, Senator VanCleave arose at his desk and interrupted Cornelius to call his attention to the fact that the bill was awaiting his signature, and to request that he affix his signature before adjourning the Senate. But the Colonel only replied that he had signed all the bills on his desk, and proclaimed the Senate adjourned. There was no occasion for him to "leave his post of duty to go and hunt up bills." He was simply required to remain at his post of duty and sign the bills that had been duly passed and had received the signature of the Speaker, instead of deserting his post in order to kill a bill which his patron did not want passed. The bill was "presented to him in the open Senate" just as other bills were; and he is condemned out of the mouth of his own advocate for not signing it.

Next the Bulletin makes a feeble attempt to ridicule the idea that the President could adjourn the Senate before the hour agreed upon. It is charitable to set down this defense as a result of want of information on the part of the editor of the Bulletin as to the practice that prevails in the Legislature. The practice is, for the two houses, toward the end of the session, to designate the time of adjournment by joint resolution. Business is then proceeded with till the designated hour arrives, when the presiding officer, without further action by the members, declares the house over which he presides adjourned without day. His decision is final in this matter, just the same as on the result of an ordinary motion. Col. Cornelius simply took advantage of his position and declared the Senate adjourned before the designated time, and, as may reasonably be inferred, for the purpose of killing the bill in question. That is the long and short of it, and no amount of ingenious special pleading will better the case before an intelligent public.

The monopolist's organ affects to believe we alluded to Col. Cornelius' aspirations to the office of Governor for the purpose of wounding the feelings of that gentleman; and it asserts that the Colonel never sought an office and never wanted to be nominated for Governor; admits that Cornelius' "friends" have always brought him forward in Republican Conventions, but says it was without his assistance or encouragement. That is very likely. These people whose names are everlastingly thrust before conventions for high offices, are nearly always forced to such prominence against their wishes, and frequently in spite of their earnest protests. Of course, they are. Cornelius is a chronic office-holder and office-seeker, and is so regarded by all who know him. But we did not refer to his repeated attempts upon the office of Governor, with any definite purpose to wound him. That consideration did not enter into the object of the reference. We merely desired to call attention to the fact, that, apparently bewildered by his longing for the position, he actually imagined himself Governor and attempted to veto important measures passed by the Legislature. So far from desiring to hurt the tender feelings of the refined and sensitive gentleman, we intended to excuse him on the plea that he was the victim of an unfortunate hallucination. We are extremely sorry to have been misunderstood in this matter; but we console ourselves with the reflection that next election will open the Colonel's eyes to the fact that he is not Governor of Oregon.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

From A. L. Bancroft & Co., San Francisco, we are in receipt of the first number of volume IX of the American Law Review, the leading periodical in the legal profession in the United States. It is a large quarterly, and is filled with interesting matters in connection with the progress of jurisprudence. The opening article is a well considered essay on the law of copyright, and the development of the idea of property in the products of literary labor. The trial of Udderzook for murder, which recently attracted so much attention, is the subject of the next paper. Then comes a discussion of the Wisconsin railway law. The digest of recent decisions is a feature of this work that makes it peculiarly useful to the practicing lawyer.

"The Circuit Rider," by Edward Eggleston, is not the newest of new publications. Many of our readers have doubtless had the pleasure of reading it as a serial in Mr. Beecher's Christian Union; and we venture to assert these will agree with us that it is a most enjoyable book. It will bear reading a second time, which is more than can be said of the average book of its class. To our thinking, however, it is not equal in raciness and piquancy to "The Hoosier Schoolmaster," by the same author. All his books are to be had of J. K. Gill & Co., booksellers of this city, so we leave the reader to say which is best where all are good.

Our veracious neighbor, the Bulletin, says we have "come to the defense of Richardson and Watson for aiding in defeating the State Prison Inspector's bill." Our readers will remember that instead of defending these Senators we said the prison was expensively managed, and that we had supposed the object of the bill was to reform the management in that respect, but that we were led to suppose by the reasons given by the Bulletin for its attack upon the members, that the ring members of the Legislature considered the matter important only as a means of getting patronage into their hands for party purposes. We refer to this specimen of the ring organ's inveracity, not because we attach any particular importance to the question whether we defend the two delinquent Republican members or not, but to call attention to the way in which a ring newspaper is conducted.

On the 20th of the present month the Legislature of Vermont elected George F. Edmunds United States Senator for six years from the 4th of March next. Mr. Edmunds first entered the Senate April 5, 1866, when he was appointed to fill the vacancy occasioned by the death of Solomon Foot. He was elected by the Legislature for the remainder of the term, and re-elected in 1868, without opposition for a term of six years. He succeeded Lyman Trumbull as Chairman of the Judiciary Committee, in the Forty-second Congress. Mr. Edmunds is recognized, everywhere, as an able jurist, an industrious Senator and a man of singular purity of character, honest, earnest and truthful. He is an honor to the State he represents, and in returning him Vermont has done herself honor. Would there were more Edmunds' in the Senate.

TWO NEW CANDIDATES.

The Cincinnati Gazette brings them forward in this paragraph:

"There is William Orton. Why should not he make as good a President of the United States as he has of the Western Union Telegraph Company?

Joseph Medill, of Chicago, is a man of fine ability, great practical experience, and well fitted for the highest office within the gift of the American people. He has returned from Europe in time to hear his name mentioned very seriously in connection with the Republican nomination for the Presidency in 1876. When the great city of Chicago was suffering from the destructive fire, her business prostrated, her government demoralized, and a good head needed to establish her credit and keep her municipal thieves in check, both parties united in calling Medill to the front and putting him in the office of Mayor, which position he filled with credit. When talking about the next Presidency, the people may as well bear the name of Joseph Medill in mind."

A CARD TO THE PUBLIC.

HAVING BEEN IMPORTUNED BY my friends to open a DANCING ACADEMY this winter in this city, and having secured the services of Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Schwendell, said parties having had long experience in California, the Eastern States and Europe as musicians and teachers of dancing, therefore I take pleasure in announcing to all my friends, and the public in general, that I will open a school of instruction in this delightful and healthy art on MONDAY, NOVEMBER 2d, at Emmet Guard Armory, cor. Front and Alder streets, in the city of Portland. Dancing taught by Joseph Schwendell, systematically, to enable the pupil to attend the most fashionable ball in the world. Lancers and Quadrilles, as danced universally, taught without the assistance of a Prompter. Also, Fancy or Round Dances, and character dances a specialty. Special attention paid to the latest San Francisco style of dancing. A rare opportunity is now offered to the young ladies and gentlemen and children to acquire the art of dancing systematically. Terms moderate.

For admission and particulars apply at Gray's Music Store.

Private lessons given at any time when desired.

All are respectfully invited by

CITY.

War Path —While the surveying party under Mr Habersham was engaged in running lines along the Columbia, between Cascades and Dalles, there came near being a difficulty with the Indians At the point near the Cascades where the river precipitates its waters over the rocks, the Indians have for a century or more been in the habit of catching salmon by means of spears and nets They have long regarded their right to fish there as an inalienable one, and any fancied encroachment on the privilege is likely to provoke their strong hostility When the party began to survey that portion of the river the Indians remonstrated against the supposed invasion of their rights They said the party wanted to blow up the rocks in the river, [illegible] of the [illegible], and that by so doing [illegible] would disappear and their fishing be [illegible] In vain the members of the party [illegible] and expostulated with Lo The more they argued the more obstinate the "Lo" grew and at length positively refused to allow the party to proceed with the work. Finding that the Indians would not listen to reason the party stood on their North American rights, and moved on the enemy's works. "Lo" always makes a practice both in peace and war to count noses In this instance the proboscis numbering was not [illegible] The Indian noses outnumbered those of the "Bostons," but the former concluded that it was no child's play to tackle fifteen brawny Anglo-Saxons especially when they were eminently "on their muscle" So after a long, angry war of Chinook wa wa in which the squaws took a prominent hand, the "Lo" gracefully retired from the field and the party moved ahead It is a noteworthy fact that the rapids still remain notwithstanding the [illegible] sition of the Indians.

Party Returned —On Thursday evening the surveying party sent out by Gen Michler for the purpose of making the reconnoissance, ordered by the Government, of the Columbia river, between the Cascades and Dalles, with a view of determining the practicability of constructing locks and canals around the falls, returned to the city This party left here nearly two months ago, and have been busily engaged in making the necessary examinations. Fifteen men composed the party in addition to surveyors axmen, chainmen cook, etc Mr R A Habersham formerly Street Superintendent of Portland, had the immediate charge of the party All the surveys and [illegible] have been completed and the instruments camping equipage etc were brought down The report of the officer in charge of the survey will soon be finished and [illegible] to Gen Michler who will examine and forward the same to the Department at Washington

The Favorite. —Mr J C Fox's new tug Favorite, which was launched last Saturday [illegible], is still below the Greenwich wharf receiving the finishing touches Machinery, boiler and engines are all in good condition having been placed in the hull prior to its being launched. Steam, Mr Fox informs us will be raised on the boat to-day or to-morrow, and the trial trip made. For its dimensions there is no tug now running on these waters which is superior in model strength or compactness to the Favorite. She has considerable power and ought to travel up quite lively Mr T J Bulger is the builder and an inspection of the new craft will demonstrate how faithfully he has performed the work It is the commonly accepted opinion that tugs can not be built north of San Francisco An examination of the workmanship displayed in the construction of the Favorite will effectually dispel such a belief

Home —Rev T L Eliot, pastor of the Unitarian church, who has been East for the past two months is now en route for his home in this city and is expected to arrive here in a short time He probably arrived at San Francisco on Thursday or Friday of the [illegible] His desire and intention was to remain in San Francisco for one week [illegible] arrived there in time to take the [illegible] will probably be a passenger on the Ajax, sailing for Portland this morning. Mr Parks, who has been occupying the pulpit of the church here during the absence of Mr Eliot, having been suddenly and [illegible] called to his home in San Francisco, the [illegible] gentleman will doubtless hasten to Portland He will either sail to day or [illegible]

[illegible] of Marriages —The unusually large number of divorce cases which have been and will be disposed of at the present term of the [illegible] Court, does not seem in the least to deter [illegible] aspirants from carrying into effect the "consummation devoutly [illegible]" Not content with accepting the experience of those who have tasted the nectar [illegible] of the marital state, the aspirants determined to repeat the folly of [illegible] the problem for themselves [illegible] present month the County Clerk has issued 18 licenses which will serve to in[illegible] the [illegible] of the marriageable pop[illegible]

Harvest Concert —To-morrow evening the annual Harvest Concert will be given at the [illegible] church by the teachers and pupils [illegible] with the Sunday School The church will be appropriately decorated with flowers, [illegible] and wheat typical of the character of the concert An interesting programme [illegible] of vocal and instrumental music, [illegible] ions and other pleasing and interesting [illegible] has been prepared To those [illegible] a pleasant entertainment is promised. A cordial invitation is extended to the public.

Theatrical Company Coming —A dispatch was received yesterday from San Francisco by Mr F M Phelps which states that a full [illegible] will leave for Portland one week from to-day It was the intention to have sailed to-day but in consequence of unavoidable [illegible] was delayed one week. [illegible] who are to visit Portland [illegible] W C [illegible], who is so well known and such a favorite in this city Owing to the delay the [illegible] will not open before about one week from next Friday

Monthly Arrests.—During the present month 93 arrests have been made by the police classified as follows. Defacing a building, 2, carrying concealed weapons, 1 fast driving 1 drunk, 55 larceny 5 contempt of court, 1, disorderly conduct, 4 desertion, 2, assault and battery, 5, discharging fire arms within the city limits, 1, passing a forged order 1 assault with a deadly weapon 1 adultery 1

Articles of Incorporation —Yesterday's Salem Record says "Articles of incorporation of the North Pacific Mutual Life Association of Portland were filed in the Secretary of State's office this morning The incorporators are [illegible] Quackenbush J L Atkinson D [illegible] W Wadhams, L White, [illegible] P. Morse Philip Wasserman and B [illegible] all of Portland"

[illegible] Up —After having undergone temporary repairs while being beached above St [illegible] the steamer Willamette Chief was brought [illegible] yesterday and now lies at the foot of Washington street In a few days the [illegible] damaged by reason of the collision [illegible] repaired in a substantial manner The [illegible] the Josie McNear will also be re[illegible]

Towed Down — Yesterday morning the [illegible] Vancouver towed the bark Hotspur from the foot of Washington street down to Flanders' wharf, where she will complete loading with grain About noon the Alice towed the schooner Oregon down to the lower sawmill where she will receive a cargo of lumber for San Francisco

Weather Report —From the records of the U S Signal Station of Observation Portland Oregon, October 30 1874

Large Funeral —Yesterday morning the remains of Mrs Mary Raleigh relict of the late Patrick Raleigh were conveyed across the river to the Catholic cemetery and interred The body was followed to its final resting place by the sorrowing relatives and a large number of sympathizing friends

Goes to Victoria.—Mr Faylor the keeper of Coggan's horse Osceola, received a dispatch yesterday from the owner of the animal, who is now at Victoria Mr Coggan told Mr Faylor to bring the horse over to Victoria as soon as possible This morning Faylor will start on the 6 o'clock boat with Osceola We understand that the animal will be put in good trim and will be entered for a single dash of one mile over the race course at Victoria On the 9th of November a race will come off the fleetest footed animal to carry away the Queen's Plate America against the world is the motto for pretty women and fast horses

The Drowned Man —Nothing has been discovered of the whereabouts of the body of the man D W Brown, who was drowned on Thursday afternoon in the Wallamet We understand that the deceased has a brother residing near Marion station Yesterday Chief Lappeus telegraphed the brother the sad news but up to a late hour last evening no response was received No efforts have been made as yet by any person or persons to drag the river for the body Some one it seems ought to take some interest in the luckless fate of the man—to search for and find the body, and give it a decent Christian burial

Sunday School Concert The Sunday school connected with Taylor street Methodist Church will give a concert to morrow (Sunday) at 2 P M A pleasant time is anticipated as this flourishing school never fails to make its entertainments interesting

Directors Meeting —There will be held a meeting of the Directors of the Washington County Agricultural Society at Hillsboro to day at 1 o'clock P M The meeting will be for the settlement of all matters pertaining to the award of premiums

Presbyterian Church —Public worship and preaching the gospel to-morrow morning at 11 o clock and evening at half past 7 Subject of evening lecture "The Perplexing Question of the Patriarch Job."

CHILLIAN EXPOSITION.

The following letter, written by Mr James Laidlaw, under date of Portland October 30, 1874 has been handed us with the request to publish the same

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN

I am in receipt of a communication from Don Francisco Second Casanneva Consul General of the Republic of Chile, from which I extract the following with reference to the Second International Exposition of Chile, to open at Santiago, September 16 1875

"Particularly inform all that may wish to exhibit that applications must be made before the 10th of November If any may feel inclined to make donations of their goods then this Consulate will pay all the expenses of forwarding said goods to the Exposition which expenses are trifling."

Persons desiring to become exhibitors can obtain from me blanks of application for spaces as also rules and programmes and other information relating to the Exposition

The various transportation companies with commendable liberality have undertaken to transport articles marked Exposition de Chile Valparaiso at a nominal freight and I therefore hope that Oregon will be there represented Yours JAMES LAIDLAW,
7 First Street

AMUSEMENTS.

There will be a Bosco matinee at the Theater this afternoon at 2 o'clock at half the usual rates. Reserved seats can be obtained at the Theater from 10 A M to 4 P M

Carl Bosco gave one of his pleasing entertainments at the Theater last evening to a crowded house In the course of the evening he performed a number of his tricks in the cleverest manner possible and then exposed them to the audience How these tricks were performed was a matter of great interest to the audience and the exposition afforded more pleasure than the performance This evening, Mr Bosco proposes to perform a great number of his tricks and to tell the audience how they are done He also proposes to give away $1 000 worth of apparatus at the close of the performance

Still Beck & Waldman are just as popular as ever, and still the people continue to rush to their place of business and buy those elegant and durable suits They are fashionable and neatly fitting and that is the reason they sell so fast

A splendid matinee will be given at 2 P M to day in the Museum Entertainment in the evening

The Wheeler and Wilson Sewing Machine is still ahead on the Pacific coast as elsewhere having this year taken the first premium at the Oregon State Fair Washington County Fair, and California State and County Fairs

IF YOU ARE TROUBLED WITH A SLIGHT COUGH Hoarseness or Sore Throat you may save the expense of a doctor's bill by using at once Dr Jayne's Expectorant. A neglected cold often terminates through much suffering in Consumption A slight inflammation of the lining of the wind tubes the usual symptoms of which are a Sore Throat or a Pain in the Breast, will if not properly attended to, frequently lead to Bronchitis. Even as a matter of economy to say nothing of comfort or the danger to pulmonary and bronchial organs act prudently with your Cold and by resorting in time to a standard remedy—the Expectorant—save money and escape more serious trouble

Puncheons of quack medicines are drunk every year Some people have a hankering after them If a tithe of what is claimed for them could be believed the Boards of Health might go into bankruptcy there would be nothing for them to do—so it goes—people will take pills and drastic-cathartics until they grow too weak for any more, or until they use PLANTATION BITTERS when they become able to go about again and so be restored to health

Sciatica is really Hip Gout and one of the most excruciating diseases which afflict mankind. It usually shows itself first on the ball of the foot, involving the toes and often the entire leg from the hip-joint If neglected or wrongly treated the disease becomes chronic and entails a life of misery upon the sufferer By rubbing the parts affected from the seat of the disease which is the hip following nerve which can be easily traced by the pressure, with MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT instant relief will be experienced and if persevered in a permanent cure will be effected

If there be one thing which disfigures the face more than another it is sallowness This results from the clogging of the pores of the skin which always precedes cutaneous disease The only remedy is the regular use of HAGAN'S MAGNOLIA BALM which opens the pores and restores the bloom of youth by removing the disturbing cause The jaded worn look of many young ladies scarcely out of their teens results from the use of pastes and unguents which excite at first but are always succeeded by premature decay of beauty

Strange Head-dresses!—A writer of the reign of the Maiden Queen described the prevailing styles of Head dressing. The hair must be curled frizzled crisped laid out in ropes wreaths and borders from one ear to the other, and lest it should fall down under propped with forks and wires, and ornamented with great wreaths of gold and silver with bugles, ouches rings glass and other such gewgaws Now a Lady needs only a bottle of LYON'S KATHAIRON to keep the hair healthy lustrous and luxuriant and a moderate amount of taste and she can excel the historic beauties of the olden times

A Universal Remedy.—"Brown's Bronchial Troches" for Coughs Colds and Bronchial Affections stand first in public favor and confidence this result has been acquired by a test of many years

GRAND EXPOSITION

OF

NEW GOODS,

At the Store of

BRADLEY, MARSH & CO.,

Extensive Shipments to Arrive

EX "JOHN L. STEPHENS" AND "AJAX."

THE FOLLOWING LETTER, FROM MR MARSH who is now purchasing in the San Francisco market will explain itself

GRAND HOTEL 7th October 1874.

DEAR BRADLEY Arrived safely having had fair average passage Set at once to work First called on —— Paid them $2,500 on account. Got 3 per cent discount on $1 150 not yet due Mr —— seemed well pleased said they had heard rather unfavorable accounts of us from Portland merchants; going ahead too fast selling goods too low ruined the trade etc Explained the evident animus of such statements Wanted to call round on the other houses before buying but Mr —— would not let me stir—so started in and bought a splendid lot of stuff at really extraordinary low prices. Cleared out 63 pieces of English waterproof and ladies cloth at 90c—regular price $1 20 These we must sell at $1 per yard and beat the wholesale houses; they can't touch them at that figure There is a temporary decline in cotton goods so secured 16 cases leading brands muslins and sheetings. Selling these as usual at cost will give us a splendid advantage over all the other stores Got a fine lot Bed spreads 20 per cent under regular price In Blankets I made a special hit. The house had 12 bales on consignment and being agents for the —— mills did not wish to exhibit them in competition, mills did not wish to exhibit them in competition, Bought the lot You may think this rather stiff, but when you see the splendid quality of these goods you will at once concede this a magnificent purchase Mark them low and make a noise Do not let the country storekeepers gobble all these up, as they did the last cheap lot keep them for our regular customers Got two job lines in Dress Goods to sell at 20@25c per yard—30 per cent. less than cost of importing Secured the original cases of the Buffalo brand silk warp Alpacas at agent's rates These range in price from 25c to $1 The time is past with us for buying a piece or two. Cleared out several job lines in Flannels Table Linen Napkins Towels etc all very low Also several other goods that can best be purchased at this house Dined and wined with Mr —— Splendid house magnificently furnished Met ——

Tuesday—Called early on —— Paid our account in full Same story as to reports The fact is the —— evidently "went for us" in very blackness of heart but our name is a tower of strength that the shot of accident nor dart of chance can neither graze nor pierce. The robbed that smiles steals something from the thief and we can well smile at these attempts to jostle a brother bearing his road on the rough road of life. The heavy cash remittances we make regularly stun them all here They say the Portland men are generally long winded. Our getting the Granger trade is also a surprise to many Purchased a fine lot of Shawls Hosiery Men's Shirts Pants Ladies Merino Vests Woolen Jackets Trimmings and all fancy goods at this house They were most anxious to sell and as they made considerable reductions in prices I bought largely Send you invoices overland Goods go by John L Stephens The shipment from England will arrive by next Panama steamer The Clothing Hats etc from New York come by rail When all these are opened out our stock will be the finest on the coast. Will back us up to any extent He knows we possess the powers ordained to last. His business has doubled this year This is truly a Golden State with its golden mines golden grain and the golden wealth of living manhood and womanhood pouring in at the rate of three hundred daily from all parts of the civilized and uncivilized world Would that we had railroads to enable us to share this prosperity S L MARSH

WEIGHED IN THE BALANCE.

Cyrus Ferriston and his mother were all that remained of the family. They lived together in a snug farm house in a district so rural that it hadn't so much as a name. It had only a number—Township Number One. People below in the adjoining farming villages spoke of it and its neighbors as The Numbers. It might have been supposed to be the outskirts of civilization—its frontier, for the nearest neighbor was five miles away, the only religious exercises were held in Deacon Crocket's kitchen three miles further off, while there was ten miles between them and the doctor. Cyrus was an energetic fellow who farmed in summer and logged in winter, that is he usually took a contract to bring the drive of logs down from the woods; therefore he had been in the habit of borrowing farmer Hutton's daughter Jane to keep his mother company and help her about the house for a small consideration. Sometimes too Jane stayed on through the summer or returned for the harvesting when it was heavy, and at such times Cyrus always observed that his butter and cheese found a more ready market, that the house was more cheerful and better kept—for old Mrs Ferriston was one of the slack kind, that provisions went further and relished better. But for all this he felt no inclination to marry Jane, as folks at Wheatfield had predicted when she first went up to The Numbers. Jane was called plain, and Cyrus had a prepossession that his wife should be rosy and dark eyed with the smile that conquers men. Jane halted in her gait the least bit in the world—his wife should have the step of a panther. She always dressed soberly, like a brown leaf as if she would like to melt into the landscape—his wife should carry her fascination into the knot of ribbon at her throat or the slipper on her foot. Therefore it was utterly out of the question, if we put any faith in logic, that Jane should become the wife of Cyrus.

Of course Jane should have left off loving Cyrus but she didn't, and naturally he was as blind as others of his sex and never guessed what an ache it gave plain Jane Hutton when he [illegible] the neck tie she had made him on his birthday, and rode off to pay his court to Agnes Price, five [illegible] across the country. She was always [illegible] when he let himself in at midnight, and went tiptoeing to his room and she lay wondering how it must seem to be loved by a man after your own heart. Her life [illegible] to promise to be all November with her. But though The Numbers were so isolated they had their merry makings. There was a quilting at Mrs Deacon Crocket's in Number Two, or a husking at Farmer Dusenbury's in Wheatfield, or a haying-bee at Deacon [illegible] barn, and there were camp-meeting days and now and then there was a wedding, and no distance was too far to travel, and Cyrus always harnessed old Dapple and took Jane along with him, as Agnes would be going with her brothers, or sometimes if the road led that way, he would call for Miss Agnes, and Jane would sit on the back seat of the wagon and only guess at what was going on before her in the twilight, hugging her pain in loneliness of heart. Nobody knew but Jane was just as happy as the others that danced Chorus Jigs and College Hornpipes—nobody ever would have known. Sometimes there was a preacher on the circuit who went about from one Number to another holding meetings, and Cyrus and his mother and Jane put on their best, and went the rounds too, and Cyrus and Agnes helped the singing, and lingered after the benediction. One week the preacher stayed at Ferriston's Farm and asked Jane to marry him, and though Mrs Ferriston was sorry to part with her, yet she advised Jane to think of it seriously, and went so far as to get Cyrus to talk with her about it. This was the last straw that broke the camel's back. Jane was sick in bed till the preacher left the Numbers.

"Dear sakes," said Mrs Ferriston, "if it's going to keel Jane over like this every time she has a beau the fewer the better. Girls didn't used to take it to heart so."

"On the whole," remarked Cyrus, "I'm glad she didn't take to him. It's selfish but how could we get on without her just yet."

"I suppose you'll be bringin' a wife home one of these days. It's a pity you couldn't hev taken a likin' to Jane yourself and she right handy in the house, and knowin' all our ins and outs, and no fault to find."

"[illegible] the one that you love best,
But yourself you'll suit the rest,"

Sang Cyrus. "Jane wouldn't have me either."

"That's for you to say," returned his mother, thinking that the girl was unborn who would refuse her Cyrus.

Well at one time they had Miss Agnes Price up at Number One to make a visit and to let her see how the land lay, and at first words weren't big enough to express her satisfaction. But she used to laugh at Jane's old fashioned way of dressing her hair and cutting her gowns, and when Jane and Cyrus got talking upon their favorite themes, she would put on her bonnet and be off for a walk, and Cyrus would naturally follow without delay. She wasn't happy unless Cyrus was praising her dress or herself, unless there were young folks invited over from the other Numbers and from Wheatfield for a frolic, or they were going abroad to some merry making, and when nobody was present but themselves, she would amuse herself taking off the folks who spoke in the last revival meeting, showing how Elder Prosy at Wheatfield, conscious in the midst of a long prayer that the candles on the desk needed snuffing, groped for them with his eyes shut, snuffed them out between his thumb and finger, and threw the red hot ends into a brother's new hat on the deacon seat and wrung his hands at this foretaste of damnation; then she would follow this episode with [illegible] "Coronation" gutturally like Deacon Crocket and nasally like old Mrs. Quaver, and relate how Deacon Crocket always omitted the bl[illegible] when they had pudding and milk for tea, and Mrs Ferriston would look at Agnes over her spectacles and shake her head in protest, but laugh in spite of herself. But by and by my lady began to suggest improvements in the house: there might be a wing built out here, the roof might be [illegible] the yard needed a new picket fence, who ever heard of a house without a flower garden?

"I thought we had one, eh Jane?" said Cyrus.

"Where ignorance is bliss," returned Agnes. "Nobody has such old fashioned things as marigolds, batchelor's buttons, hollyhocks, and love-lies-bleeding in their garden nowadays, everybody laughs at 'em."

"I suppose the Lord made 'em," objected Mrs Ferriston, and then Agnes openly confessed that she should die of the landscape papering on the best room, which Mrs Ferriston had guarded from the flies for years as if it had been a gallery of paintings by the first masters, and for her part, Agnes declared, looking out at the window, she hated to see nice fields about a house disfigured with vulgar looking pumpkins and cabbages. After she went home Cyrus set to work quietly making some of the alterations she had suggested—for they were to be married in the spring—asking Jane's opinion and co-operation as if she had been a sister. In the first place he built on the wing and he cut another wing to Jane's room.

"You'll be able to see to prink better, Jennie," said he, "or maybe—on second thought—maybe you'd rather have a room in the new wing? Take your choice," for Jane's parents were dead and she had now been living year in and year out at The Numbers.

"I shan't want either one or the other, thank you," she answered.

"Why not, I should like to know? Are you going to swing in a hammock among the trees?"

"I'm going to seek my fortunes," she laughed, because she felt more like crying.

"Going away from here, Jennie!" he cried, dropping the hammer with which he had been driving nails. "Where are you going?"

"I don't know—somewhere." He paused a moment as if he was trying to understand her, and perhaps his eyes were opened a crack; then he picked up the hammer and resumed his work.

"I never thought of such a thing, Jane," between the blows. "There's no need of it. At least you'll stay—till—till—spring?"

"Yes, I will stay till Agnes comes," she answered.

The winter set in early that season, and Cyrus went, as usual, into the woods logging, leaving his mother with Jane for company and a small boy to clear the paths and look after the stock.

When Seth Price joined Cyrus' camp a week before Christmas he carried him a line from Agnes, saying that she should expect him down to watch the new year in and the old year out at the watch meeting, if he loved her. [illegible] Smiley had offered to lay a wager that he wouldn't put himself out so much, and even Mrs Deacon Crocket had said it wasn't likely, seeing he was sure of her; but she had set her heart upon showing them how much he cared for her.

It isn't every lover who could resist such an appeal, and though Cyrus didn't think it of the least consequence whether other people believed in his love or not so long as it was a reality to himself and Agnes, yet he was doubtless flattered by her earnest desire for his presence, and if it would please her, why not go? It did not occur to him that it was as much a vulgar wish to make a parade of his regard for her as a desire to see him. It happened very luckily, however, Cyrus thought—and perhaps most people would agree with him—that the camp had run short of molasses, and one of the men was detailed to take a team and go to Wheatfield for a supply—for what was coffee without molasses? He started on the last day of December and Cyrus with him, and he dropped Cyrus where the roads diverged, one leading into Wheatfield and the other to The Numbers.

There was a matter of ten or twelve miles between Cyrus and the Price farm when he left the team, but he had often walked further with a load of produce for market. The distance didn't strike him as being of any consequence; he had all his life been used to milestones. It had begun to snow some time before, gently, as if it meant no harm, and Cyrus was used to snow too. But presently the wind changed and blew roughly and tossed the flakes into his eyes, and the flakes themselves grew bigger and thicker till they clogged his steps and blinded his sight and obliterated every landmark. Still he trudged forward, cheering himself with the warm welcome before him, assuring himself that the way was as familiar as his own potato field, till by and by he began to wonder if he were not watching the old year out by himself, if he had not been longer on the road than the distance warranted, if he had not missed the way, if it were not growing colder and darker every moment. He knew about as well where he was as if he had traveled into Nova Zembla or had been cast away on an iceberg. He paused and rested against the bole of a tree to collect his wits. There was no use in proceeding further on the wrong road. In coming to this decision, he naturally sat down by the way to reflect which was the right one. He did not reflect long. Lovely images and colors floated before his mind's eye. He had reached the farm and there was a great back log blazing on the hearth for him, and brown eyes looking into his, and tender tones in his ears. Then he came to himself with a start and sat upright, peering into the black night upon which the storm seemed an inscription in an unknown tongue, waked by the rending of some great limb from the tree above him, which had fallen and pinned him to the ground. The dangers of his situation were too evident for conjecture. He would be frozen stiff before cock-crow, even if he were not dead of the blow first. Through the storm and darkness he called for help without daring to hope for it, put all his waning strength and despair into a few imploring cries and fell benumbed with pain, with one leg crushed and broken. It looked very much as if he would bear the old year company.

Jane had sat up later than usual that night, cutting a piece of stuff out of the loom which she had finished weaving that afternoon. Mrs Ferriston was sound asleep, and the farm boy had gone to the watch meeting, and as Jane raked up the coals on the hearth, she wondered if Cyrus was holding watch with Agnes—who had boasted that she would bring him down from heaven if she wanted him—and if he would be coming home to kiss his mother in the early morning. Then she went to the door to look out at the night, which was not more lonely than she, to bid adieu to the old year, and was it the shriek of the wind or a human voice that smote her ears?—a voice that sounded strangely like his. Oh, if it should be! If he were [illegible] her! At least somebody on that lonely waste was in trouble, perhaps dying. If she went to her safe warm bed and waited for daylight, she might never be able to get that cry out of her ears! So she raked open the coals and piled on the logs, she set a lighted candle in the window, she put a flask of brandy in her pocket and a bunch of matches, took her lantern and pushed out into the storm, with answering cries that help was near.

The wind slapped her in the face and shrieked about her ears till she half misdoubted herself, but destiny led her to where Cyrus lay not a quarter of a mile from home. She was down on her knees beside him in the drift instantly, rubbing him with the snow that sifted about him, chafing his hands in her own soft palms, struggling with the imprisoning bough, letting the brandy trickle down his throat, warming him into life with her cheek against his, and calling to him with all the tenderness of her soul, with all the endearing names that love invents, for in that awful moment she had forgotten that he belonged to any one but herself. Perhaps in the gradual reawakening he may have caught the meaning of this, but he gave no sign of it. By her frantic efforts Jane succeeded in removing the limb that had fallen upon him, and having pushed and dragged it to a safe distance she made a bonfire of it which illumined the ghastly night fantastically, and kept the wolves at bay that were howling in the woods near by. It was only then she discovered that his leg was broken! There was but one thing to do, however; she provided him a counterpane of spruce boughs as warm as wool, gathered dry fagots in the edge of the woods, and extended her blaze in a circle about the disabled man, like an Indian watch fire; then she hastened home and, as his mother was too infirm to give assistance, she yoked the steers into the drag—for old Dapple's slender legs could not flounder safely through the drifts—and urged them slowly across the untrodden snow, guided by the lantern, to the nearest neighbor, five miles away, who willingly left his warm pillow, and, with his son of fifteen, plodded back on the drag to where the watch fires smouldered and Cyrus waited.

It was not long after this before Cyrus was safe in bed, with his mother and Jane administering to him, and neighbor Goodheart and the steers on the way for the doctor. But it was many a long week before he left his bed; indeed, the drifts had dissolved like magic and spring had woven her spells in blade and bud, and the grass was long and ready for mowing before he took his first step into the air, and then he leaned on Jane's arm and walked with a crutch. The folks in The Numbers said he would always [illegible] to use a crutch unless he [illegible] a cork leg. When the doctors from Wheatfield and beyond had decided upon amputation, Cyrus had sent for Agnes. Perhaps he had meant to give her her freedom with a lingering hope that she would reject it; perhaps he craved the solace of her presence before [illegible] journey toward the Valley of Shadows. Nobody ever knew; it was only known that she refused to go to him. The people in The Numbers [illegible] her, according to their natures and [illegible]. "She didn't promise herself to a cripple." "It's better to live unmated than ill matched." "She's like to go all the way through the woods and pick up a crooked stick at last." "It's a poor kind of love that's scared at misfortune," were some of the current remarks passed from mouth to mouth.

And so the year wore through, and Cyrus could no longer go up to the Aroostook lumbering, nor swing his scythe in the meadow. He had to hire a hand about the farm. But while he sat at home with idle impatient hands inspiration came to him as he watched Jane laboring at her wheel, and he invented a spinning machine. About this time old Mrs Ferriston slipped away out of life, and one day Mrs Deacon Crocket rode over to engage Jane for her winter's weaving.

"You won't be needin' a housekeeper no longer, I s'pose, Cyrus," said she, "and folks allus talks so, so, thinks I, Jane had better come home with me for the weavin'."

"Jane," he said, for Mrs Deacon Crocket used an ear trumpet, and was no kind of hindrance to love making—"Jane, you promised to stay with me till Agnes came. Will you keep your promise?"

"Yes, Cyrus, I will if you insist upon it," she answered.

"Jane and I," he said, speaking into Mrs Crocket's trumpet, "are going down to Wheatfield this afternoon to be married."

Mrs Crocket took the Price farm on her way home for fear her news would spoil if kept over night.

"Cyrus Ferriston's going to be married," said she, "and no thanks to you, Agnes Price. Jane Hutton's a lucky gell."

"Do tell!" cried Agnes. "Never swam a goose so gray but what could find its mate! I always thought she had a hankerin' after him. S'pose I shan't be asked to stand up with em! What a figger they'll cut when they pear out together! I never could have borne to go hoppin along with a man like that all my days—it didn't look genteel!"

"But they do say," continued her comforter, "how he's made a power of money out of that machine of his'n—it's jest like spinnin' gold. And they're talkin' about sendin' of him to the Legislation, and then I s'pose Jane'll go too, and help represent."

The aspect of local finances is not disturbed to-day by any material fluctuations or important transactions which would indicate either a greater supply or increasing [illegible] city. All kinds of business seem to be well supported, and outside of those in some way connected with the moving of the products of the country there is no active demand, which is well in one respect, as the heavy draft on the surplus available funds in the market made by grain buyers is sufficient to take it all up. This fact also indicates that other branches of business are being transacted on a conservative plan, but it also shows that local enterprises and improvements are not being pushed forward, or in other words that the country is growing slowly.

A Washington dispatch says Congress will be asked for additional legislation to place the Treasury Bank Note Redemption Bureau in such condition as will enable it to meet all requirements without the possibility of future suspension. It is considered in official quarters that the deposit of five per cent of the reserves affords too slight a foundation for operations. Some banks failed to deposit even that amount when the Bureau was established, and it was difficult to induce them to comply with the law. The amounts of worn and mutilated notes for redemption daily received are now comparatively small, but it is feared that if the Bureau should resume without due preparation notes would be received in such accumulated quantities as to materially embarrass business. It is uncertain when redemption will be resumed.

Produce Market.

In the chief staple, wheat, there are no important changes to note to-day. San Francisco and foreign advices denoting a steady and quiet market. Receipts continue very large, near 500 tons coming in to-day by the cars and boats, besides the quantities by wagons being by no means insignificant. The vessels now on the berth all filling up quite rapidly. They are the City of Dublin, Sattara, Glenlyon, Agra, Hotspur, James Wishart and Elizabeth Dougall, the one last named taking on a large lot of flour for the Hongkong market, the others loading for Europe. It is reported some heavy transactions in wheat are taking place up the river, and that there are more sellers than buyers. As near as we can arrive at quotations wheat brings [illegible] cents at Salem, [illegible] cents at Eugene and above there, [illegible] at Harrisburg, [illegible] at Albany, 47½@60 at Wheatland. Salem mills have taken in from producers up to this time 130 000 bushels, a larger quantity of wheat than those mills purchased at that place all last season.

In other staple articles of produce prices are steady, the tendency of feedstuff being downward; bran quotable at $11 50@12 per ton. Eggs and chickens are in rather better supply and prices weaker. Bacon very scarce and firm. Vegetables and fruits of seasonable kinds are very plentiful and find slow sale at low figures.

Shipping Intelligence.

The bark Hotspur has again dropped down to Flanders wharf where she will complete her cargo at a very early day.

The ship Sattara is receiving cargo on owners account at Greenwich dock.

The schooner Oregonian is taking on produce at the eastside wharf. She will probably go down the river to-morrow.

The City of Dublin is very nearly ready to drop down the river. She is being loaded entirely with flour.

The James Wishart and Agra are preparing to receive their cargoes of grain.

The schooner Superior is receiving freight for San Francisco at the wharf foot of Yamhill street.

The steamship Ajax will leave San Francisco to-morrow for this port.

SOLDIERS'
WAR CLAIM AGENCY,
No 34 MONTGOMERY BLOCK,
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

W. H AIKEN, ATTORNEY AT LAW AND Commander of the Grand Army of the Republic in California and Nevada, will give prompt attention to the collection of Additional Travel Pay now due California and Nevada Volunteers discharged more than three hundred miles from home. Soldiers can depend on fair dealing. Information given free of charge. When writing enclose stamp for reply and state company and regiment, and whether you have a discharge. Congress has extended the time for filing claims for additional Bounty under Act of July 28 1866 to January 13 [illegible], so all such claims must be made before that time. Original Bounty of $100 has been allowed all volunteers who enlisted before July 22 1861 for three years if not paid the same when discharged. Land Warrants can be obtained for services rendered before 1855 but not for services in the late war. Pensions for late war and war of 1812 obtained, and increased when allowed for less than disability warrants, but no pensions are allowed to Mexican and Florida war soldiers. State of Texas has granted Pensions to surviving veterans of Texas Revolution. New Orleans and Mobile Prize Money is now due and being paid. W H Aiken also attends to General Law and Collection Business.

DESPERATE ENCOUNTER WITH A BUCK.—Capt. [illegible] B Colby, an old sea captain and also [illegible] hunter and sportsman, narrowly escaped [illegible] while out hunting on Friday of last [illegible] It appears that he shot and wounded a [illegible] buck; the animal fell and the Captain [illegible] supposing him mortally wounded went up to [illegible] cut its throat. The wounded animal ral[illegible] and attacked the Captain, when a desper[illegible] tussle ensued, the deer furiously attempt[illegible] to gore the hunter with its horns. The [illegible] where the conflict first commenced was [illegible] small plateau, but soon the combatants [illegible] a slope of the mountain where both [illegible] and fell and rolled down a steep de[illegible] some thirty or forty feet. Regaining [illegible] first Captain Colby [illegible] on the [illegible] with a revolver. The buck getting upon its [illegible] renewed the fight with its antlers, but [illegible] the Captain got in a "center shot" and [illegible] off victorious, not, however, without re[illegible] numerous wounds about his person. The Captain, as we before remarked, is an old [illegible] but we doubt if he is particularly anx[illegible] for just such another encounter. His [illegible] on being weighed, pulled down 190 [illegible] and was one of the largest ever killed [illegible] section of country. We are informed [illegible] it was a very fat buck.—Calistoga Free [illegible], October 24th.

AN "ENTHUSED" DEMOCRAT AT THE WHITE [illegible]—The rampant roosters which all the [illegible] Democratic papers wear since they heard the [illegible] from Ohio and Indiana are not aggra[illegible] enough to sensitive Republicans, it ap[illegible] but the exultant opposition must de[illegible] other means of agonizing the loyal heart. [illegible] morning a dilapidated looking character [illegible] in the costume of the days of Andrew [illegible] Jackson appeared upon the portico of the White House. On his arm he carried a basket, [illegible] from this he drew a bottle containing a fluid [illegible] the messengers say looked like muddy [illegible] (but it was evidently something with [illegible] snap in it) and proceeded, after the [illegible] of a priest at the baptismal font, to [illegible] the stone floor. Having done this to [illegible] own satisfaction he replaced the bottle in [illegible] basket and brought forth a printed placard [illegible] up on it in large letters the word "For [illegible]" After placing this on one of the col[illegible] at the side of the main entrance door, [illegible] shuffled away with the satisfied air of a man [illegible] had done his duty, and was content. He [illegible] seem to realize that this is the off year.—[illegible] of last night.
